What is Zona Tres in Just Cause 4?

Zona Tres is a weather research base in Just Cause 4. The in-game map description states: "This secret facility has been instrumental in stemming the destruction caused by the tornadoes prowling the pampas." This facility is a weather base for researching tornadoes. As such, this facility is a...

Is a wind nest a defense against a tornado?

The wind nest that produces the tornado could be seen as some kind of defense, but the other two are otherwise constantly protected by weather. Not to mention the tornado actually moves away from the base and doesn't stay in place. There is one near a generator, but that's it.

Is there a weather zone near a generator?

There is one near a generator, but that's it. Also unlike the other two zones, this one has to be captured before the relevant operation, whereas the other two are captured at the end of their respective operations. Unlike Zona Uno and Zona Dos, the weather created here actually does significant damage to the base.

Stunts and challenges are types of side-missions in Just Cause 4. Not to be confused with improvised stunts. Stunts (see improvised stunts) have always been a major part of the Just Cause game series. As of JC4 they are actually needed for 100% settlement completion. Region strikes will occupy the region, but doing all the stunts will mark the settlement as "complete"; ...

Just Cause 4 is fun. I got bored with it real, real quick though. ... The water and waves from JC3 were truly next gen stuff, you could literally see every single gust of wind create detailed ripples across the surface of the water. The water in JC4 is literally just a flat mass with a copied and pasted "waves" texture over the entire surface.
